TRENTON, Ga. (Nov. 6, 2025) — The Dade County Board of Commissioners issued a proclamation recognizing November as National Hospice and Palliative Care Month, honoring the compassionate professionals and volunteers who provide comfort and support to individuals and families during times of serious illness.

Chairman Don Townsend presented the proclamation during the county's November workshop, noting that hospice care plays an essential role in ensuring dignity and quality of life for patients and their loved ones. Townsend expressed appreciation to the local hospice providers who serve Dade County, emphasizing their commitment to care and compassion.

"There are at least three hospice care options available to residents in Dade County," Townsend said. "We are grateful to each organization and the dedicated nurses, staff, and volunteers who provide this invaluable service to our community."

Hospice Month is observed nationwide each November to raise awareness of the benefits of hospice and palliative care and to recognize those who deliver these services with empathy and professionalism. The Dade County Commission's proclamation reflects the county's support for the individuals and families who rely on these services and for the caregivers who provide them with comfort and peace.

Residents who would like to learn more about hospice and palliative care resources may contact their healthcare provider for information about local and regional options for end-of-life care.
